Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

Microsoft continues to develop business strategies which have a direct effect on the consumer and developer communities. One of the objectives of these strategies is always to impede other companies from developing technologies which might interfere with Microsoft's goals. Examples: Netscape Navigator and Java Technology. Even after the Antitrust suit was filed, Microsoft continues to try make it harder for other companies to develop their technologies. Example: Microsoft .Net strategy. And Microsoft says look at all the great things we have accomplished. But, much more could have been accomplished if Microsoft wasn't always trying to inhibit other companies abilities to compete in a fair market. I will only support a settlement which does not allow Microsoft to continue to bend the laws to suit there strategies.
